OVERVIEW

Course overview

This course will enable experienced coaching practitioners from a range of high-performance, educational and voluntary environments to continue to develop their unique coaching practice whilst building their professional network.

Teaching staff have extensive experience supporting the development of bespoke learning programmes to develop unique professional skills, whilst working in collaboration with national governing bodies and public service organisations.

You'll develop greater evidence-based appreciation for coaching practice, whilst collaborating with practitioners from a range of sporting disciplines to enrich your student experience.

Portfolio projects will be co-designed by you and your academic tutor to personalise content and structure to your learning needs and career aspirations. Alongside this, portfolio design can be completed via collaboration with your employer, CPD mentor or groups of coaches on the programme.

Recent students have used this portfolio process to create valuable professional development resources for their workplaces and personal networks, as well as national governing bodies of sport.

WHAT YOU'LL STUDY

What you'll study

MSc

Alongside taught modules that explore the principles underpinning effective coaching and pedagogy, you'll complete individualised work-based portfolio projects, allowing you to link practice to theory, and then back to practice again.

Core and optional coaching modules, studied alongside MSc Sports Coaching students, will enable the valuable sharing of best practice. Recent topics have included the craft of coaching practice, coach philosophy, language, behaviour and planning.

Knowledge gained will support you to collate your experiences in an extended work-based portfolio project, designed and complete in partnership with your personal academic sports tutor, who will have a wealth of sports coaching industry experience.

Your portfolio can focus on practice within your current workplace role or used to plan and explore future developments linked to your coaching environment and career progression plans. Coaching contexts span teaching and education, coach development and supporting high-performance athletes.

Alongside advancing your own professional development, your project can be used to inform industry practice. If applicable, your employer/colleagues can contribute to project aims, design and focus to create resources, presentations and ongoing discussions as part of a long-term continuing professional development process.

Postgraduate Diploma

The postgraduate diploma programme offers flexibility to those working in full-time sport roles, providing a taste of postgraduate study where you can scaffold learning alongside existing commitments and continue your professional development.

The postgraduate diploma includes all initial core modules and focused research within a coaching context that will reflect your current coaching role or career ambitions – these environments include high-performance sport, coach development and educational environments of all kinds and age groups.

Modules

Below you'll find the compulsory modules for this course.

You'll also be able to choose from a range of optional modules to suit your interests and career goals.

Optional modules change each year in line with student, industry and research demands.

COMPULSORY MODULES

Postgraduate Dissertation (MSc only)

Develop and implement a research project of your choosing. You'll be allocated an individual supervisor to guide and support you to undertake this innovative independent piece of research.

Further details

+ Duration

One year, full-time

You can study each of these qualifications full-time and subsequently complete each within one year.

Two-three years, part-time

Alternatively, we offer flexible part-time options to help students to manage their studies alongside other commitments. These options can be tailored to suit your own needs, enabling you to complete your qualification in two or three years. Please enquire for further details.

+ Module credits

The modular structure of the programme gives you flexibility and choice. You can attend introductory sessions for optional modules before deciding which ones you wish to study.

On successful completion of your modules you'll gain academic credit that accumulates towards your award. The marks you gain may contribute towards your final master's degree differential award (pass, merit or distinction).

+ Teaching modes

This programme offers students a mixture of classroom learning and independent research. Modules are generally based upon informal seminars facilitated by each module tutor and one-to-one tutorials allowing students to work around their other commitments. Some modules may bring in guest lecturers to provide topical and industry-relevant talks.

This course is taught in English.

+ Timetables

This programme has been designed to fit around those working or volunteering within the sector.

Timetables, available during enrolment, are very flexible, but we recommend that you discuss this with a member of Hartpury staff in person before applying for the course.

Each semester normally consists of 12 weeks of scheduled teaching and then assessment weeks, with an overview below:

- Scheduled teaching generally takes place across block weekends (Friday – Sunday)

- Delivery on the teaching weekends is normally scheduled between 9.00am – 5.00pm
- Part-time students typically study for fewer block weekends across an academic year
- Attendance dates and timetables are available before enrolment to support the arrangement of annual leave where required
